Landon Crider joined Moore Ingram Johnson & Steele in 2018 as a member of the firm's Worker's Compensation Department.

Landon grew up in Powder Springs, GA and graduated from McEachern High School. After high school, he continued his education at Georgia State for both his undergrad degree and law school.

Prior to working for Moore Ingram Johnson & Steele, Landon clerked for several firms during law school in multiple practice areas including criminal defense, civil litigation, and immigration. He was a student intern for the Georgia Public Defender Council in the Office of the Capital Defender as part of a clinic through Georgia State College of Law. Afterward, Landon went on to work for a firm in Alpharetta representing Community Associations.

Landon Crider was married to Lyla, in September 2016 and now lives in Marietta, GA. In Landon's spare time, he and his wife love to visit the beaches of Tampa as often as possible.
